A true entrepreneur should always be the contrarian and should work towards being the first to enter a new market. The first-mover advantage has enormous business value.
Businesses are not here only to make money. Their role is also to be part of a community, take responsibility, and walk the talk of upholding ethical principles to enhance the quality of life for all.
“The entrepreneurial journey is a humbling one in which you will encounter many obstacles. It is very important to accept change and remain positive. If you do what you love and love what you do, it will reap countless benefits.”
“It comes down to touching the lives of women. A lot of discipline is required to not be tempted or distracted by what competitors are doing. We won’t want to lose ourselves in the pursuit of newer customers, we want to stay true to our brand and identity, even if it means taking the long and winding road.”
